Digital signal processing is the processing of digitized discrete-time sampled signals. Processing is done by general-purpose computers or by digital circuits such as ASICs, field-programmable gate arrays or specialized digital signal processors (DSP chips). Typical arithmetical operations include fixed-point and floating-point, real-valued and complex-valued, multiplication and addition.

Audio signal processing is a subfield of signal processing that is concerned with the electronic manipulation of audio signals. As audio signals may be represented in either digital or analog format, processing may occur in either domain. Analog processors operate directly on the electrical signal, while digital processors operate mathematically on the digital representation of that signal.

Figure 8.2 shows schematically the result of convolving two zero-padded signals and . In this case, the signal starts some time after , say at . Since begins at time 0, the output starts promptly at time , but it takes some time to "ramp up" to full amplitude. (This is the transient response of the FIR filter.) If the length of is , then the transient response is finished at time .
