Take your child on "field trips" to local places in the community to "study" for play! • Use the Tools approach to "transitions" -- engage your child in pretending. When it's time to leave the playground, or brush teeth, suggest that your child (and you!) . . . "pretend to be giant elephants, swinging our trunks like this. . . " as you move toward the destination! • • Invite friends over, and support your child's play with other children.

Wake up early enough so that you and your child don't have to rush to get to preschool. Make breakfast for your child and, if possible, sit down to eat together” or at least talk with her as she eats and you get ready. Review the day’s routine (what preschool will be like, how your child will get to school/come home). Pack your child’s backpack together. If your child is bringing lunch, select foods that you know are his favorites.
