

heading east true north pdf

An aircraft's heading is the direction that the aircraft's nose is pointing.. It is referenced by using either the magnetic compass or heading indicator, two instruments that most aircraft have as standard.Using standard instrumentation, it is in reference to the local magnetic north direction. True heading is in relation to the lines of meridian (north-south lines).

Large Local Variations. The difference between true and magnetic north varies by location and over time. In most populated parts of the world, it currently ranges from 30 degrees west (south-eastern tip of Africa) to 26 degrees east (southern tip of New Zealand).However, most locations on Earth have a considerably smaller declination.

Magnetic Declination - Magnetic Variation - Time and Date

Magnetic declination, or magnetic variation, is the angle on the horizontal plane between magnetic north (the direction the north end of a compass needle points, corresponding to the direction of the Earth's magnetic field lines) and true north (the direction along a meridian towards the geographic North Pole).This angle varies depending on position on the Earth's surface and changes over time.

NMEA 0183 is a proprietary protocol issued by the National Marine Electronics Association for use in boat navigation and control systems. Because early GPS sensors were designed for compatibility with these systems, GPS reporting protocols are often a small subset of NMEA 0183 or mutated from such as subset.
