Pair programming is an agile software development technique in which two programmers work together at one workstation. One, the driver, writes code while the other, the observer or navigator, reviews each line of code as it is typed in. The two programmers switch roles frequently. While reviewing, the observer also considers the "strategic" direction of the work, coming up with ideas for ...

NONLINEAR PROGRAMMING min $x^T f(x)$, where $f: n \rightarrow \mathbb{R}^n$ is a continuous (and usually differentiable) function of n variables $x \in X$ = nor X is a subset of \mathbb{R}^n with a continuous character. If $X = \mathbb{R}^n$, the problem is called unconstrained. If f is linear and X is polyhedral, the problem is a linear programming problem. Otherwise it is a nonlinear programming problem

Interesting that the accepted (and heavily upvoted) answer doesn't actually answer the question, even as originally posted. Designated initializers don't address the OP's problem, which is to split the declaration from the initialization. For pre-1999 C, the only real solution is to assign to each member; for C99 and later, a compound literal, as in CesarB's answer, is the solution.
